The defeated candidates for Aldermen were Timothy Flannagan in the Second district and James J. Kerwin in the Sixth district. The nomination in both of these districts is usually equivalent to election. There were no contests for Aldermanic honors in any of the cornessing delegations in the Wounded his feelings he showed no signs of it. Imperviousness to critical means one of the traits with which he was one of the traits with which he was always credited.

His education he received in Public school No. 17, which was located in the old Fourteenth ward. He was graduated from this school when he was sixteen years old. He decided that he wanted to start in life as a cooperation of the corner of North Sixth street and Wythe avenue, then the heart of the great sugar refining industry. had five children, but all of them died in infancy.

It was in 1881 that Senator McCarren became actively interested in politics, and was elected to the Assembly by the Democrats of the Sixth Assembly district, which took in the Fourteenth and Fifteenth wards. In 1883 he was re-elected, and it was during that year that Mrs. McCarren died, leaving him a widower.

WON FAVOR AGAIN.

But it did not take McCarren long to win back the favor of his constituents. The following term he was sent back to the Senate, and since then it has been the belief that only a political revolution could beat him. He attended every Democratic State convention since the one in 1885 that nominated Hill for Governor, and every national convention of his party since 1884, when Cleveland was nominated, save in 1900, when he took a trip to Europe. save in 1900, when he took a trip to Burope.

It was in October, 1903, when Hugh McLaughlin boited the Tammany ticket that the veteran Brooklyn leader was shorn of his power and Senator McCarren, after a bitter fight, became the "boss" of the Democratio machine in that borough. At a meeting of the executive committee McCarren was made chairman of a special committee selected to manage the campaign. This was just before the election of Mayor McClellan to his first term. McLaughlin had refused to support Grout and Fornes, who had been nominated for Controller and president of the Board of Aldermen respectively.

McCarren took up his headquarters in the Thomas Jefferson building and from there prosecuted the campaign that helped to elect the Democratic city ticket despite the efforts of McLaughlin and his followers to defeat it. McLaughlin had reigned for forty their might against what they called "Trolleyizing Brooklyn." David A. Boody, a democrat, was Mayor of Brooklyn at the time, and he had signed the resolutions of the Board of Aldermen for the trolleys. Brooklynites did not want trolleys then, and Charles A. Schieren, republican candidate for Mayor, carried the entire ticket through by a landslide that swept away McCarren. Whenever rugs are discussed, Anglo-Persian rugs should rightfully be placed first. They belong at the very top at all such times. There are no rugs made anywhere in America that are to be compared with them in beauty or fineness or distinction of pattern. Beside this, they can be counted upon for good long service; they are made of fine yarns dyed by special and proved processes which take nothing from their strength. These yarns are then woven upon special looms into Anglo-Persian rugs. The dye and the quality and the finish all unite to make these yarns of special beauty. Only by their use is it possible to make such rich rugs, rugs with so subtle an attraction, with such elusive and charming luster.

Whittall, who makes Anglo-Persian rugs, has also caught the inspiration of the Orient. Never before have rugs been made in America that looked so like those from the other side of the world. In design and color, harmony and in attractiveness, these Anglo-Persian rgus are worthy of place alongside the imported carpets.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES A good cleanser for hardwood is to wash it with a clean fiannel wet in turpentine and rub lightly afterward with boiled linseed oil.

Bric-a-brac should be carefully dusted before being washed in hot borax water or soap suds in which a little ammonia has been dissolved.

If one has baked beans left and does not wish to use them warmed over, try making into a salad or soup. They be made. About 70 were to noon today.

The soft, velvet cupin, such as is used to keep a man's slik hat in condition, is equally satisfactory for a woman's hat, whether velvet or felt.

Peaches and cream is a traditional favorite, but not many know that a dish fully as good is ripe pears and cream. The pears should be very cold.

Do not wash colored fabrics in the same water with white ones. This especially holds good if one happens to have table linen with colored bor-to have table linen with colored borders.

Bric-a-brac containing mother-of-pearl should never be cleaned with soap and water. Instead, it should be rubbed with a cloth dipped into whiting and water.

Paint the inside woodwork of bed-steads with corrosive sublimate and turpentine, five cents worth of the former to a pint of the latter. It will destroy all vermin.

To make egg gruel, beat one egg in a bowl, add salt, a little parsley, a teacup of boilling water. Cut into small pieces a slice of toasted bread and pour gruel over it.

To run roads through the sash curtains, put a thimble on the end of the rod, or the finger of an old glove, and the rod will slip through without tearing the fabric.

Little white spots on the nalls are generally caused by the use of a hard instrument in pushing the cuticle back from the nall. An orangewood stick should be used instead.
